Forest Service Announces Ginseng Permit Process for 2016

2016 ginseng permitting and harvesting process for Cherokee National Forest

CLEVELAND, TENN, July 19, 2016 – U.S. Forest Service officials announced that the period for applying for 2016 ginseng permits for the Cherokee National Forest will be August 1–August 19. A random permit drawing will be held to determine who may purchase a ginseng harvesting permit. Ginseng collecting is limited because of concerns for overall reductions in wild ginseng population numbers throughout its natural range.

For 2016 a maximum of 40 permits will be issued allowing 25 roots (approximately ¼ pound) per permit to be collected. The 2016 Cherokee National Forest ginseng permitting and harvesting process will be as follows:

- The 2016 ginseng collection season will be from September 16- September 30. This two week period will be the only time that ginseng can be legally collected in the Cherokee National Forest by valid permit holders.
- The Forest Service will issue a total of 40 permits, each with a maximum limit of 25 roots.
- A drawing will be held to determine the 40 permittees. Twenty permits will be issued for the northern half of the Forest (Watauga & Unaka Ranger Districts) and twenty permits will be issued for the southern half of the Forest (Tellico & Ocoee Ranger Districts).
- Permit drawing applicants may only apply for either the north or the south Cherokee NF.
- Permits will cost $20 and are limited to one permit per person per year. Permittees must be at least 18 years of age.
- Five ginseng collection zones have been designated for the north Cherokee NF (Watauga & Unaka Districts), and five collection zones for the south Cherokee NF (Tellico & Ocoee Districts). One zone on each half of the Forest will be open for collecting each year. Collection zones will be rotated each year to allow plants a five year recovery period necessary to help ensure populations remain sustainable.
